The Registration Bill will take precedence of railway bill.

A special meeting of the Edmonton Presbytery was held in the Edmonton Presbyterian church last evening for the ordination of two candidates for the ministry, A. M. The following ministers were present, Rev. M. White, Lacombe; Rev. J. E. Briggs, Wetaskiwin; Rev. Mr. Forbes, Fort Saskatchewan; Rev. D. G. McQueen and Rev. Mr. Douglas of Edmonton.

DEATH OF BISHOP CLUT.
Travelers from Athabasca. Landing brought news yesterday afternoon of the death two days previously of Rev. Bishop Clut, auxiliary bishop to Rev. St. R. Grouard, of Lesser Slave Lake, at St. Bernard Mission. Bishop Isidore Clut was born at Saint-Hubert, Quebec, in 1857. He was ordained as priest, coming to Western Canada in the same year. His first station was at Athabasca Lake and he was in charge of the missions of the lower Mackenzie. In 1885 he was appointed bishop and acted as auxiliary bishop at Athabasca Lake. About 1890 he was appointed auxiliary bishop at Lesser Slave Lake, where he has been since the present. Rev. Bishop Clut was one of the pioneer priests of the Canadian far north-west. As far back as 1853 he descended the Yukon river in the pursuit of his missions. His life was always one of great industry and missionary zeal until finally cut off by his late and lamented death.

PERSONAL.

N. D. Beck left for Winnipeg this morning.

Mr. Jas. Reid returned to Lacombe this morning.

Mrs. Johnston Walker and Miss Walker left for a visit to Vancouver this morning.

John Giles left this morning for Hay Lake with a gang of about twenty men to put up hay.

Regina Leader.—Dr. J. Dow of Belmont, Ont., is in the city on a visit to his nephew, Mr. J. T. Murrie. Dr. Dow will continue his trip through to Edmonton.

Rev. Mr. White arrived in Edmonton last night from Lacombe to attend the special meeting of the Edmonton Presbytery. He leaves this afternoon for Belmont to take charge of Mr. A. M. Ross's mission while Mr. Ross goes to Lacombe for a couple of weeks.

Calgary Herald, July 20.—Bert Atkinson was found dead in his room this morning. Dr. Simpson was called, but unfortunately found that he had been dead some little time. Deceased was one of the best known business men in the city, having been here for more than twenty years.

Free Press.—Rev. S. S. Burns, B.A., formerly of Ottawa, has been in the city for two days. He left this morning for Manitoba, where he will supply in the Presbyterian church for a couple of weeks. It is Mr. Burns's intention to look over the West with the idea of locating here, and with this end in view, he will visit Portage in Prairie, Brandon, Calgary, Regina, Edmonton and other important places in the West.

Jack West, one of the pioneers of the Klondike and at the same time one of the most successful men of the whole Yukon Territory, has come to Edmonton with the intention of making it his future home. Mr. West has been here on two former occasions and evidently looks upon this district as having more opportunities than any other place in America. He left the Yukon last fall and has since then travelled over Mexico and the United States. While in the Yukon Mr. West devoted himself to mining supplies and goods of all kinds for the Territory, as well as having, which he still owns, the leading hotel at the head of the Yukon River, the Commercial Hotel at White Horse. Mr. West says that it is not his intention to invest at present in town property, having had agents in the district for some time looking into coal and farm lands which for the time being would take up his attention. He has also a hundred head of horses and other stock on the way up here from his ranch in Oregon, but has not yet made a selection of a range for them.

WETASKIWIN.

Times, July 16.
Carpenters are busily engaged fixing up the interior of John West's furniture warehouse for the Imperial Bank, which will move in at an early date. Mr. West is having the upstairs fitted up for offices.

The Wetaskiwin creamery, which experienced some difficulty in getting patrons at the first of the season, is now working quite satisfactorily. Last week 1,245 pounds of butter were manufactured, and this week it is expected that there will be 1,500 pounds made while several new patrons have signified their intention of commencing next week.

WEDNESDAY JULY 22ND, 1903.

As to Immigration

During a debate which took place in the House of Commons on Tuesday, July 14, Mr. Oliver spoke as follows:—
Hansard report, Tuesday, July 14th.
Mr. FRANK OLIVER (Alberta).—Mr. Speaker, as the hon. member has called to witness representatives from the Northwest in regard to this subject of immigration, it would hardly be keeping it to me to give a response. I would take the liberty of suggesting that the subject of immigration takes on different aspects according to the different points of view from which we regard it. It looks very different to a man in Halifax, who merely sees the immigrant from the steamer to the train, from what it does to the man who has to live alongside that immigrant for the rest of his natural life. I do not wish to overstate, to discuss particularly the feature of the question which has been treated by the hon. member for Halifax (Mr. Roche). Since I have had the privilege of being a member of this House I have taken the view that indeterminate immigration was anything but a desirable policy for the country, and that selected emigration was by all means the policy we should follow. Let me call the attention of the House to the importance of the character of the immigrants coming to this country. These immigrants usually come in for the purpose of settling in the Northwest. It is in the nature of things that the country between the Lake of the Woods and the Rocky Mountains will, at no distant date, dominate this Dominion. The House will relieve me from any imputation of talking bombast when I say this, because it must be admitted that with fifteen hundred miles of unbroken fertility in that country, every foot of which is suitable for cultivation and the profitable support of human life, there are bound to be more people there than can possibly find employment in these Eastern provinces. The filling up of the Northwest with settlers, therefore, is not merely a question of furnishing a market for the manufactures and the traders of the east. It is not merely a question of filling that country with people who will produce wheat and buy manufactured goods. It is a question of the ultimate result of the efforts being put forward for the building up of a Canadian nationality, so that it shall be one of the great civilized nations of the world, and one of the greatest forces in that civilization. This can never be if the proportion of the population is of such a class and character as will deteriorate rather than elevate the condition of our people and our country at large. It is the feeling of the people of the Northwest that we should bring into that country a high class rather than a low class of immigrants. Our Western people are convinced that it is in the highest degree necessary for the welfare of this Dominion that there should not be any deterioration in morality and intelligence and in civilization in the settlement of our western territories. When I took the liberty of placing these views before this House some years ago, the reply was made that we must have settlers, we must have people to cultivate our prairie lands, and if we cannot get them from one class, we must get them from another. In my opinion, that argument was not good then, but even if it were, it does not exist now. There are desirable people, our equals in every way, in civilization, intelligence, enterprise and aspirations, pouring into that country by the hundred thousand. We are, therefore, not dependent on picking up settlers wherever we can. We are getting settlers of a most desirable character, and every undesirable settler tends to keep out a desirable one. That is the point of view from which I regard immigration, and I believe it is from that point of view that the majority of the people from the Northwest regard it. They do not want to see their institutions deteriorated. They do not want their political or social or municipal life to be placed at the mercy of people who do not understand their benefits or advantages. In any country whose government depends on the popular vote, every voter is a part of the governing body, and in bringing people into the Northwest, we are introducing people who will have as much to say in the government and the management of this country, man for man, as we will find in the rest of the Dominion. Mr. Roche thinks it is good thing for this country that its destinies should be placed in the hands of those whose ideas and aspirations are not the same as ours. I certainly cannot agree with him. I believe in a vigorous immigration policy, such as has been pursued by the government of this country, but I believe the success of that policy to be rather in the unpopulated administration of the land and affairs generally of the Northwest making that country desirable to settlers of a high class rather than to a class of people who do not work. There is no need of depending on the less desirable class of immigration, when we can certainly get the more desirable class. It is not any longer a question as between immigration of an undesirable class and no immigration. The country has got beyond that point. It is now a question as to whether it was not before, as between a less desirable and a more desirable class of immigration. Something has been said, I understand, about the paying of bounties or commissions to induce immigration. To my mind, if ever there was need for that system, that need has passed. The payment of bounties and commissions has a tendency to bring the less desirable rather than the more desirable class of people. The work of inducing immigration is carried on in many different ways. Some are better than others, and I would take the liberty of suggesting to the House that there is a certain system being carried on today which is in every way desirable, a system which is producing the best possible results, and which may very well be enlarged so as to continue these results. I speak of a system which is followed in one case by Mr. Swanson, who is especially an agent for the immigration of Scandinavians, more particularly of Swedish people. He is an enthusiastic and successful subject. His system of work is to go to the colonies of his countrymen in the United States and deal with the people personally and individually. He does not induce or ask any man to come whom he does not consider a desirable settler. Then, when he gathers together a large party as he can handle well, he accompanies them right to the ground where he intends to locate them, he sees them located, takes an interest in them while they are preparing their new homes, and goes back for another party. That may seem a slow process of inducing immigration, but I may tell the House that, as the result of the work of that one man applied in that way, there have been added to the population of the district, which I represent, some ten of fifteen thousand people, all of a character which does not admit of any question—undiluted, unadulterated, and the people, people full of the highest aspirations of civilization. Another gentleman who carries on much the same work is a Canadian, who goes to Scotland, selects his people there, brings them out, places them and goes back for more. What I suggest is that this system of selected immigration be extended and expanded, and be depended upon for the filling up of our country. The system, I claim, coupled with satisfactory administration and with a sound policy for the development of our country, will bring an immigrant from year to year, and by that system we avoid any question arising from inducing the lame or the halt or the blind, or the mentally or physically or socially unfit.

Many widely different ideas are held and expressed in regard to this great Northwest. There is not to be on the one hand, an idea that the Northwest does not matter, and the immigration that comes in does not matter so long as it goes to the Northwest. Another idea is that the Northwest is so good and so great that it does not matter either for it will be all right in the end. Now the Northwest is a great country, it is a large country; but it is not a country without limits or without limitations. It gives great opportunities for the exercise of intelligence, energy and enterprise; but it does not provide intelligence, or energy, or enterprise. It gives an opportunity for the people who have these qualities, but if the people who have them, these qualities fill up that country, then we have such a country as that from which they came. Now, the Northwest, I said, has its limitations and its limits. It is not so large a country but that it can be filled up. We have not before us the prospect of continuous, and ever-increasing, and forever, pouring people into the Northwest. It can be filled up it will be filled up within a moderate period of time. And I say the responsibility rests upon this House and upon the government upon any government that may be in power, to see that the people who fill up that Northwest, who ultimately will dominate the affairs of this country are of such a character as shall not lower the aspirations that we have for the improvement and advancement of this great Canada of ours. We spend hundreds of thousands, we spend millions year after year for the purpose of elevating the moral, social and political condition of our people; and it is to be said that from year to year, while we make this effort with one hand, we should with the other hand, bring in a class of people who individually or collectively will doubly or trebly increase the task that is set us. Let me inform the House that there are already in the Northwest some very serious social and political questions, arising from this indiscriminate immigration, which, if they continue to increase, will do to the country, in the west and in the east, incalculable harm.

Now, as to the possibilities. Mention has been made of a certain class of immigrants who have come, and objection has been raised particularly to that class. I believe the government is being held up to condemnation because of their efforts in bringing in that class of people. This is a mistake. The government is not bringing in that class of people. It is not now putting forth any effort to bring that class. These people are coming in because of the pressure behind and not because of the efforts put forward to draw them. And therein lies our greatest danger. It is because the conditions in the country in which they live are unfavorable, it is because there is continuously pressure behind them, the pressure of political tyranny, the pressure of landlordism, the pressure of race and religion, that they are being driven out of that country into this. And we stand at the mercy of these people in their thousands, in their hundreds of thousands, and in their millions at no distant day. This, Mr. Speaker, is not a fancy picture, it is not a dream; it is a matter of fact. If my hon. friend from Halifax (Mr. Roche) speaks as an expert in regard to the appearance of these people, I take the liberty of saying that I speak as an expert in regard to the conditions that prevail in the country from which they come, having received the information from their own lips. There are millions of these people who live under conditions which tend to drive them out of their own country. They certainly find the conditions favorable here, and they are coming in increasing numbers every year, without government assistance or government aid. This is the danger in which we stand, and this is the future of the immigration question, which the House should be well aware of and should be prepared to deal with as I believe it will have to be dealt with.

As to the immigration that is coming from the United States as I said in the beginning, this is the largest immigration we are getting, and is certainly mainly a most desirable immigration. The only immigration that could be more desirable would be that from the British Islands. I do not speak of the movement of our own people to the Northwest, for that is the most desirable of all, and that I am glad to say, is a movement that is increasing from year to year. It is a pity that it had not started sooner, but thank God it has started at last, and we are getting our own people to settle in our own country. Canada is the greatest emigration country in the world. We have sent more of our own people into foreign lands within the last thirty years in proportion to our total population, than any other country on earth, not barring Ireland. The fact is, we have sent so many of our people into the United States within the last thirty years that of this tremendous immigration that is coming from the States, a very large proportion are our own people coming back, or their descendants. This fact shows to what a tremendous extent our people have gone to the States in previous years. These people are desirable, take them in the mass, desirable in every way. They are people of intelligence, of energy, of enterprise, of the highest aspirations. They speak the same language, they worship in the same churches, they have the same political ideals, although they have been engaged in different political institutions. Moreover, these people are the strongest objects to the idea of indiscriminate immigration. They have suffered from that in the United States, and they will hold up both hands against such a policy in this country. We, in the west, believe in a vigorous immigration policy, but we do not believe in a policy of indiscriminate immigration. A policy of selected immigration will fill the Northwest as fast as is good for the country, as fast as is good for the Northwest, as fast as the people can be properly assimilated, and that is the policy we desire to uphold in this House. We cannot have that policy without a satisfactory administration of public affairs in the Northwest; we cannot have it without a satisfactory policy of railway development in the Northwest. We have had a satisfactory administration; we have a policy of railway development. We believe that the Northwest, and very soon all Canada, are entering upon an era of progress and prosperity, such as it is usual to say was never dreamed of—but such as was dreamed of twenty years ago, but was not realized then, for reasons which it is not necessary to mention, but which is being realized now to the fullest limit of the wildest dreams of that day. Because of that fact, it is more than ever necessary that there should be a careful selection of the immigration that comes into our country. It is not now so much a matter of bringing people in as it is a matter of saying whom we will accept.
